No evidence for inhibition of thymidylate synthase during induction of differentiation of human promyelocytic leukemia cells. All-trans-retinoic acid (ATRA) has been proposed to be a growth modulator in several human neoplasms. In the present study, the effect of ATRA on growth and expression of thymidylate synthase (TS) was investigated in the HL-60 cell line. ATRA caused a substantial (90%) increase in granulocytic differentiation of HL-60 cells, whereas no significant effect on cell proliferation was seen. These effects of ATRA were time- and dose-dependent. TS expression was not reduced during differentiation. ATRA-induced differentiation was associated with a decrease in cellular 5, 10-methylene tetrahydrofolate. It is suggested that ATRA exerts its growth-modulating effects via other mechanisms than an inhibitory effect on TS expression.Kylie Minogue performs live at the Ronnie Scott's Jazz Club in London, England. (Photo by Jeff Kravitz/FilmMagic) Kylie Minogue has been performing in her "Shocked" and "Hand On Your Heart" concerts for the past few years, but this week she's going to take it all the way and it's for a good cause. On Tuesday, October 22, the singer will be performing two nights in Chicago, IL, including a fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) at Chicago's Navy Pier. The fundraising event will also benefit the JDRF's Walk to Cure Diabetes, with proceeds going toward research into finding a cure for Type 1 diabetes. Minogue told Us Weekly that she's thrilled to be able to help someone with diabetes, and the charity's cause is close to her heart. The singer's mom, Dannii Minogue, was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes when Kylie was just 12 years old, and she had always wanted to do something with the charity as a way to help her mom in the long run. "It was important to my mother that I not only contribute to the 'cause' but that I actually DO something with the charity because she is the one that's really benef 82157476af
